Chore Leave

As my teenage daughter was leaving for the evening, she looked at my wife and me and teased, "Now, don't do anything I wouldn't do."

My wife promptly replied, "Then I guess I won't be doing the dishes tonight."

March is the happy side of spring coming and the pleasant side of winter leaving.

On my drive home, I was passed by a tow truck. Glancing at the logo on the sparkling clean truck, I read the firm's motto:

"We don't want your arms and legs, just your tows."

At a church get-together, a group of women were discussing the health benefits of a daily bowl of oatmeal. One woman stated that she never put sugar or cream on her porridge.

"Then you must be Scottish," my wife said.

"No," the woman replied, "I'm fattish."

While recovering from abdominal surgery, I progressed steadily from a liquids-only diet to the day when the doctor announced that I could move on to "real food." The patient in the bed next to mine looked up from his meal tray and said, "I guess that means you'll have to order out."

"Why did you marry your husband?" the neighborhood gossip asked. "You don't seem to have anything in common.

"It was the old story of opposites attracting each other," explained the wife. "I was pregnant, and he wasn't."

My granddaughter Karissa came to spend a few weeks with me, and I decided to teach her to sew. After I had gone through a lengthy explanation of how to tread the machine, she stepped back, put her hands on her hips, and said in disbelief, "You mean you can do all that, but you can't operate my game boy?"

My two sons, who are six feet eight inches tall, consume a tremendous amount of food and drink. Out to dinner one night at one of our favorite eateries, which has a policy of free refills on beverages, my older son was keeping the waitress very busy. As the harried waitress came to the table and put the ninth refill in front of my son, she asked, "Can I get you an IV?"

When a snail crossed the road, he was run over by a turtle. Regaining consciousness in the emergency room, he was asked what caused the accident.

"I really can't remember," the snail replied. "You see, it all happened so fast."

A fisherman accidentally left his day's catch under the seat of a bus. The next evening's newspaper carried an ad, "If the person who left a bucket of fish on the No. 47 bus would care to come to the garage, he can have the bus too."

Joe and Irving are led to a wall to face a firing squad. The commander comes over and blindfolds them. Disdainful, Joe rips his from his face "Please, Joe," pleads his buddy. "Don't make trouble!"

My Neighbor successfully bid on a used school bus which he thought his son, a sheep rancher in southern Alberta, could use to transport the animals. He and his son revamped the interior of the bus, and soon it was rattling down rural roads with sheep peeking out the windows. In bold letters across the back was its new name "Ewe Haul."

My friend and her 3yr-old daughter Madison were in the garden. Madison asked if she could taste a raspberry her mother gave her one, then asked, "Who made the raspberry?"

Madison smiled and replied, "God did."

Later, Madison asked for a taste of rhubarb and ended making a face. Afterwards, her mother asked, "who made the rhubarb?"

"God did," Madison replied.

"But He didn't do a very good job!"

The whole family helped my parents pack for their move into town. They had lived on a farm for over 50yrs and had accumulated a lot of stuff. My brother, a pharmacist, was in charge of cleaning out.

"Hey Dad," he called out at one point, "this veterinary medicine expired five yrs ago."

"That's okay," dad replied.

"We sold the cows ten yrs ago."

One morning, my 15-yr-old son, David, came across a box of cereal in the cupboard and asked his mom how long it had been there.

She told him it wasn't that old. David grabbed a handful from the box and fed it to our dog, Spunky. Then, he listened to the loud crunching coming from Spunky's mouth. "Sounds good," he said, and poured himself a bowl.

An electrician and his helper were trying to hook up power to our trailer. The electrician was down in a manhole, nonchalantly handling a large bundle of wires, when he was asked by his helper, "Aren't you afraid of those wires?"

"Nope," replied the electrician.

"Come on down and help me."

"No, sir," the helper said.

"Somebody's gotta stay up here and tell the boss what happened to you."

Every morning my son and daughter-in-laws cat sat just outside their bedroom patio doors at daybreak demanding to be let in. To break the cat of this annoying habit, they put a bucket of water in their room ready for the next morning. When the cat started its persistent yowling; my son, half asleep, leaped out of bed; grabbed the bucket and threw the water at the cat. The patio doors were closed.

A colleague asked if I'd take her car to the garage for inspection. I agreed, but was worried that it might fail on a couple of things. However, I was completely unprepared for the reaction of the mechanic. "The best thing I can suggest for this car," he said, "is to take the seats out and keep chickens in it."
